THE TIMES KODAK.
Interesting News Items Gathered Around Salem.

Mrs. W. O. Simmons, of Norfolk, is here on a visit to her mother.

Among the Roanoke folks in Salem yesterday was genial Bob Coleman.

Mrs. E. R. Moore, who has been visiting relatives in the West, has returned home.

Miss Sallie Bransford, who has been visiting friends in the South, has returned home.

L. M. Lewis, one of the employees of the Bonsack Machine Company, crushed his finger badly in a planer yesterday.

Rev. H. C. Garrison preached last night at the Disciples' Church, to which there have been seventeen accessions in the past week or so.

Fred White, son of Deputy Clerk S. M. White, fell nineteen feet out of an apple tree Sunday at his home on Craig avenue, and it is feared is injured internally, as he is suffering great pain and vomits at intervals.

Those who heard the lecture delivered by Rev. H. C. Coleman in Taylor Lodge Saturday night spoke in the highest praise of it, and there was a large crowd at the Presbyterian Church Sunday night to hear the same gentleman deliver a lecture upon the Holy Land.

Daniel Grisso, who lives near Cave Spring, was in town yesterday and made complaint to Justice Camper that on Sunday night J. A. Campbell and a gypsy, called Mitchell, had come to his house, and that soon after midnight Mitchell got up and left, taking away with him Mr. Grisso's gold watch and a pair of corduroy pants. About 3 a. m. Monday Campbell got up and told Grisso the gypsy had left to get a posse to kill him, and with that dressed and started home on a run. A warrant was issued for Mitchell and later on Campbell was arrested by Special Constable S. B. Hancock, who brought him to Salem, where he was taken before Justices Phelps, Richardson and Camper, who remanded him to jail until he can be examined as to his sanity, which will probably be today. During this last attack of Campbell's he has become a regular nuisance, and it is hoped by his friends that he will be sent to Marion for treatment.

In the County Court.
The May term of Roanoke county court convened yesterday, Judge Moffett presiding, and the following business was transacted:

The rule issued against H. C. Cooper, to show cause why he should not be fined for not keeping a proper fish ladder, was dismissed.

The following special grand jury was summoned and sworn: A. M. Bowman (foreman), J. H. B. Stevens, D. A. Brumbaugh, J. T. Haley, E. S. Strayer, J. M. Watts, Patterson Coon and Frank A. Gish. The judge in charging them mentioned particularly two points, viz: The late law prescribing penalties for injuring fish, to which the court desired particular attention given, and the other in regard to violations of the local option law. The jury retired and were in session until about 4 o'clock, when they brought in true bills as follows:

For selling liquor without license—J. I. Nichols, four indictments; Alex. Craig, two indictments; James Early, four indictments; Fred Early, one; A. J. McFadden, five; also an indictment against James Harvey for carrying concealed weapons and one against James Walker for attempted rape.

J. Edgar Webb and James Abshire were appointed special constables and took the oath of office.

A rule was issued against C. L. Bush to show cause why he should not be fined for not having proper fish ladder at his dam on Back creek.

James Hunt was tried on an appeal from a magistrate's court on the charge of illegal fishing before a jury, who returned a verdict of not guilty.

On motion Messrs. Ammen Starkey, Joe Woods, Harvey Henderson, John Johns and W. W. Brand were appointed to assign dower to Maria Wright of the lands of F. A. Wright, deceased.

The case of Massie Pollard, a white woman, charged with receiving stolen goods, was tried before a jury who after hearing the evidence brought in a verdict of "We, the jury, find the prisoner guilty and fix her term of imprisonment in the county jail at ninety days, with the recommendation that she be, in the meantime properly treated for the opium habit during her confinement in the jail." A motion for new trial was overruled and exceptions were taken.

In the case of J. T. Harvey indicted for carrying concealed weapons the prisoner entered a plea of "not guilty" and the case was continued on motion of defendant to June term. The case of James Walker charged with an attempt to commit rape, was set for Monday week.

PERSONS who sympathize with the afflicted will rejoice with D. E. Carr, of 1235 Harrison street, Kansas City. He is an old sufferer from inflammatory rheumatism, but has not heretofore been troubled in this climate. Last winter he went up into Wisconsin, and in consequence has had another attack. "It came upon me again very acute and severe," he said. "My joints swelled and became inflamed; sore to touch or almost to look at. Upon the urgent request of my mother-in-law I tried Chamberlain's Pain Balm to reduce the swelling and ease the pain, and to my agreeable surprise, it did both. I have used three fifty-cent bottles and believe it to be the finest thing for rheumatism, pains, and swellings extant." For sale by the Chas. Lyle Drug Company, druggists.

Chamberlain's Eye and Skin Ointment Is a certain cure for Chronic Sore Eyes, Granulated Eye Lids, Sore Nipples, Piles, Eczema, Tetter, Salt Rheum and Scald Head, 25 cents per box. For sale by druggists.

TO HORSE OWNERS.
For putting a horse in a fine healthy condition try Dr. Cady's Condition Powder. They tone up the system, aid digestion, cure loss of appetite, relieve constipation, correct kidney disorders and destroy worms, giving new life to an old or overworked horse. 25 cents per package. For sale by druggists. The Charles Lyle Drug Co., agents.

FOR THE WATER NYMPHS.
Bathing Costumes That Are Things of Beauty and Joy for a Season.
The time of year has arrived when every little piece of water big enough to get into assumes an inviting glassiness of surface and warm limpidity of depth that tempt one to plunge in regardless of consequences unless one be of the exceptional class who do not enjoy open air bathing. To those who are sufficiently warm blooded or sufficiently active swimmers to feel no physical discomfort from immersion in cold water there is no amusement quite so exhilarating. All children delight in dabbling in water, and perhaps this is a survival of childish tastes. At any rate, it is a very innocent pleasure and a very leveling one. We all look alike in the water, as far as distinctions of beauty and society go, provided we are all real water lovers and do not merely pretend to bathe. The wet hair of the mistress and of the maid looks equally like seaweed, and the nose of the patrician and of the proletariat burns regardless of class distinctions. Many persons who cannot bathe in fresh water can go into salt water with impunity because of its vigorous and stimulating quality. A pretty bathing suit keeps its beauty in fresh water far longer than when it is worn into the ocean, but that is the only point in which the advantage does not rest with salt water. One does not swim quite so rapidly in the latter, but one keeps up longer and with less fatigue on account of its buoyant quality. An illustration is given of a white flannel bathing costume. The bodice, which is made with a yoke, is gathered into a belt, to which are sewed the short trousers. The scant skirt is gathered into a belt having buttonholes corresponding to buttons on the belt of the bodice and trousers. The sleeves are short and are held to the arm by elastic to prevent chafing, which is sure to happen if a swimmer's sleeves are left loose. The wide sailor collar is of navy blue flannel, as are the band around the skirt and the belt.

A BATHING COSTUME.

JUDIE CHOLLET.

THE BEST DRESSED WOMEN.

Judie Chollet Says They Are the Women Who Wear What Becomes Them.

In spite of the brilliant colors which are undeniably the mode at present, gray is also worn and appears in fashionably made toilets. After all, the dictum of extreme fashion is only implicitly obeyed, by persons so conscious of a lack of taste and judgment in such matters as to be quite at a loss unless following the lead of an accepted authority. Fashion demands the use of magenta, and they accordingly wear magenta, thereby securing to themselves the repose of feeling that they are fashionably if not becomingly clothed, and there are many women who will consciously choose extreme fashion rather than extreme becomingness in garments.

Fashion is far more strict as regards form than in respect to color. Few colors ever go completely out of her garment except magenta and the very vivid blues and greens, and these are by no means universally becoming. The best dressed women are those who know what best suits them and have the courage of their convictions in spite of fashion laws and prophets.

One may choose any color and yet be in the mode this season, however, since every tint is well represented. Purples, greens and pinks are rather more decided in tone than they have been for several years past and are more generally employed, but there are enough persons who prefer mode colors to have the latter well represented in all fabrics. Black is decidedly in vogue, as would naturally be the case during a highly colored season, as it is required by way of contrast and for toning down effects that might otherwise seem gaudy.

Today's sketch shows a costume of silver gray accordion plaited foulard combined with striped silk. The striped skirt has a very deep accordion plaited flounce of gray foulard. The corsage is of the gray accordion plaiting, as are also the wide epaulets and the elbow sleeves. The yoke of the bodice is of striped silk and is bordered with black passementerie. An orange satin girdle encircles the waist and gives color to the costume. The child's frock is of rose, white and yellow plaid foulard.

JUDIE CHOLLET.

The Overskirt Question.
The question of overskirts does not seem a very absorbing one in the spring fashions. Enough are shown in the new gowns to give the style support and credence; but, according to the New York Times, they are rejected with remarkable unanimity in favor of the still modish and elegant plain skirt or with a bit of trimming that really only accentuates its plainness. The short, pointed overskirt in particular meets with a cold reception. It has a dowdy and ungraceful effect, and why it should be insisted on has not been demonstrated.

DID THE HORSE PLAY THIS TRICK?
How Two Spanish Gentlemen Happened to Forget to Pay Their Check.

There is a small all night restaurant in a Twenty-eighth street basement where gentlemen of more or less bohemian instincts sometimes go for a quiet bottle and a taste of reasonable delicacies.

As I sat there one night I observed that the two sharp featured gentlemen in dress suits who sat at the table next to mine had already dispatched their second bottle of Chateau Yquem, besides a liberal array of toothsome edibles. They were now chatting over their cigarettes. The greater part of the conversation was in Spanish. Finally they gathered up their overcoats to go, and as they stepped toward the desk, apparently to settle the bill, one of them said to the waiter, "Call in our cab driver and give him a drink."

The john entered promptly. "I'll leave the door open if you don't mind, so as to keep an eye on the horse," he said. "He plays tricks on me sometimes."

The bouncer "night hawk" had raised his glass, of a liberal three fingers of whisky, and was just remarking, "Ere's looking at ya gentlemen," when he glanced out the open door and realized that the "horse that plays tricks sometimes" was leisurely ambling off toward Broadway. Dropping the glass unemptied, he bolted for the door, closely followed by the two gentlemen who wore dress suits and talked Spanish. The latter were laughing merrily, as though the whole affair were a good joke.

They didn't come back right away, and when the cashier, somewhat uneasily, went outside and looked down the street, night hawk, "horse," Spanish gentlemen and all had disappeared.

Then the cashier came back behind his desk. He looked ruefully at the figures on the unpaid check, banged the cash register viciously as he rang up another customer's 15 cents for a cocktail and remarked, "I'd like to know whether that 'horse' was taught to play those tricks or whether my Spanish friends simply took advantage of what was really an accident."

The worldly wise bartender stopped rinsing a glass, dipped a towel disdainfully over his shoulder and said with a pessimistic grin: "There's more ways than one to beat the house. I never saw that trick done before, but I've heard tell of it."—New York Herald.

A Famous Beadle of Paris.

Discours, the beadle of the Church of St. Roch, in Paris, died on Saturday. He was almost famous for his tall stature, imposing air and portly figure, and was at once the talk of the Paris beades and the senior of them all. Provost, the beadle of the Madeleine, stood next in stature, and after him came the beadle of Notre Dame, an ex-drum major, who was engaged two years ago by Archbishop Richard.

Discours was a passionate lover of billiards and went every evening to play at the Cafe Regence, where he used to measure his skill with M. Grevy before the latter was president of the republic. He constantly saw there a man taller than himself, Mr. Theodore Tilton, the American poet, who went to La Regence to play chess and was more than a match for Grevy. The post of beadle in a Paris church is a much envied one among the class of men who compete for it. At Notre Dame, the Madeleine and St. Clotilde the salary is £200, and there are perquisites at grand weddings and funerals. In smaller churches the pay is £40. The gorgeous uniforms and silver headed wand are provided by the vestry.—London News.

Boiler Scales.

The use of oil in preventing boiler scale now so prevalent is met with the objection that in using other than standard oil of 150 to 200 degrees fire test there is danger of the formation of what is called oil scale. This, according to chemical authority, is owing to the fact that when the higher fire test oils are introduced they rise and float upon the top of the water, and the latter, impregnated with sediment and mud, boils and bubbles up through the oil scum on top, and on the water becoming vaporized it liberates the particles of mud and scale contained, which fall back upon this layer of oil upon the top of the water. After awhile the layer of oil becomes so impregnated with mineral substances that it sinks to the bottom of the boiler, forming an incrustation, or oil scale, which is as injurious to the boiler as is the lime or magnesium scale. But the same objection, it is remarked, has also been made to crude petroleum.—New York Sun.

To Her Art.

Mme. d'Allertin, one of the lesser painters of France, was as conceited about her artistic ability as she was notorious for her excessive use of cosmetics of all kinds. Her face was a study in enamel, rouge and penciling, and the older she grew the more pronounced it became. On one occasion a certain count, who held her in much disesteem, lost a bet to her.

"And what will madame choose?" he asked, with mock courtesy.

"Something in my art," she stammered. "Something I can paint."

"Very well, madame," he replied, bowing himself out.

A day later madame received a package from the count, which, upon being opened, revealed a life size drawing of her own face in outline.—Detroit Free Press.

Wondrous Evolution.

"In the slow evolution of the race," mused the elephant, looking with languid interest at the throng of curious gazers that stood on the outside of the ropes and fed him with cakes, peanuts and candy, "how many millions of years it must require to evolve from the shapeless and rudimentary projection on the face of the creature called man the full and perfect proboscis!"—Chicago Tribune.
